Cooling gel cloud layer

The Cooling Cloud is the first layer of comfort on the mattress of Puffy. It is comprised of cooling gel-infused memory foam. The Cooling Cloud acts as a layer of transition between the memory foam and the firmer support layer below. Climate Control is also included in the mattress. This layer helps to cool.

The Cooling Gel Cloud layer helps keep you cool during the night by wicking away body heat. It is also stain-resistant and hypoallergenic. The Puffy mattress's cooling cloud foam layer offers cushioning and support for those who sleep on their sides. It reduces pressure points and helps improve spinal alignment. This feature is particularly useful for those who sleep on their side.

The Cooling Cloud layer is 2 inches thick and is filled with gel. This layer keeps the mattress cool and encourages airflow. This layer is also designed to stop foam from expanding or contracting based on temperature. The majority of foam expands when it is hot, but it contracts when it is cold, which could affect its ability to ease pressure. The Climate Comfort(tm) layer resists these temperature fluctuations, and is a crucial feature for those who sleep on mattresses.

The Puffy mattress has three layers of foam with an air-cooling gel cloud. The memory foam layer is the first, and doesn't allow for much airflow. The cooling gel cloud layer added to the top memory foam layer helps to eliminate this problem and makes the mattress more comfortable. The top layer is comprised of memory foam with a high resistance to humidity that keeps it breathable.

The Puffy mattress is virtually silent. You shouldn't hear anything when you sleep, even if you move around often. However, it is important to know that many mattress boxes emit a distinct off-gassing smell it's normal and is harmless. The smell is only temporary and will disappear within 24 to 72 hours.
